New Media Law LLP have teamed up with CREAT-ED Consulting to relaunch their highly acclaimed in-person short course Complete Entertainment and Media Law.

The course will run in central London over 10 weekday evenings in February and May and also as a 5 full day intensive in June.

Taught entirely by the professional legal team at New Media Law, the course provides a definitive and comprehensive study of the latest best practice, contracts, disputes, current case studies and the impact of new technology across Music, Film, TV, Publishing, Games, Trademarking and digital IP.

Ian Penman, host tutor and founding partner of New Media Law LLP, explains “pre-pandemic we ran the course each year for in-house lawyers across media and IP companies as well as for several large brands. We found the course provided professionals and law graduates alike with invaluable first-hand insight into the creative legal landscape, driven by new technology, case studies and policy, that is very hard to keep up with in isolation at work or University without direct first hand exposure to the cutting-edge issues, such as AI.”

Course graduates agree:

"The Complete Entertainment and Media Law course was an incredible opportunity both from an academic as well as a professional perspective." Irina Palaiologou

"The Complete Entertainment and Media Law course was a fantastic precursor to the intellectual property course in my final year of my law degree at the University of Edinburgh. The area of the course that I enjoyed most was the practical awareness given by the lecturers knowledge that is not necessarily taught at University." Taryn Ng

Complete Entertainment and Media Law covers in-depth study of:

Contract Law, Copyright Law, Trademarks, Artist Management, Record Labels, Music Publishing, Film & TV Law, Competition Law, M&A, Books and Authors, Magazines and Newspapers, Defamation Law, Data Protection, GDPR, Image Rights and Privacy, Engagement and Contracts, AI, Blockchain and Impacts of New Technology on IP and Law.

Also, in a first for any legal short course, all current Law students are guaranteed a work placement at New Media Law LLP, providing a practical application of study and a career pathway platform for the next generation of professional lawyers.
